

July Program: Creating High-Performing Teams in a Design-Build World

Design-build projects are naturally complex with multiple partners collaborating to deliver outstanding results. The more partners, the better the chances of communication breakdowns, finger-pointing, and ultimately, failure. To combat these complexities, a successful design-build team needs to be high-performing, from the owner to the subconsultant and everything in between.

Join us in the afternoon on July 25th over a frosty beverage as Kelly Reed with CMA discusses how to develop a high-performing team before the RFP hits the streets. Kelly will discuss how to define objectives, get the right people on the bus, chart the course, execute, and perform a continuous cycle of sense, learn, and adapt.
