

October Program: K-12 Construction Projects Panel

With states and school districts continually trying to figure out budget shortfalls, the case for design-build continues to grow stronger with its money and time-saving abilities. However, in states like Missouri, where design-build is now a legal delivery method, few, if any districts have looked that direction. Join us on October 10 as our panel of education experts discusses trends they're seeing with construction projects in their districts and how the Missouri legislation is impacting the use of design-build for K-12 projects.
